

Please do not approve any regulations governing telemarketing that would override our Indiana state law. We have a wonderful law here that at last allows us to prevent intruders from constantly disturbing our home. We can actually talk to each other at dinnertime instead of being interrupted by phone calls that we don't want. The Indiana law is the only way I can think of in which a government has improved the quality of my life in the last quarter century, and I hope you will not permit it to be gutted by overriding federal regulation.